

Bionote: Dorte Lønsmann

Dorte Lønsmann is Associate Professor at the Department of Management, Society and Communication at Copenhagen Business School. She works within linguistic anthropology and researches linguistic diversity at work, including language socialisation and language ideologies at work, language practices among blue-collar workers, social and linguistic norms in transient multilingual communities, and the implementation of corporate language policies. Her current research in the Transient Multilingual Communities project focusses on language classes and internships for refugees, and the surrounding discourses of language and integration. Her work has been published in journals such as Multilingua, International Journal of Cross Cultural Management, Journal of Linguistic Anthropology and Language in Society.

Further information about Dorte Lønsmann: <https://www.cbs.dk/en/research/departments-and-centres/department-of-management-society-and-communication/staff/dlmsc>